Rules of Play

When things get interesting the game is played in Turns of about ten seconds in length. Use a surface marked in squares (20-25mm or 1").

Each turn follows the sequence below:

1. Movement

Heroes can choose to move before or after their enemies. Note that squares are 5' across.

They can move up to 3 + Speed in squares, -1 if in Medium Armour, -2 if they are in Heavy.

You cannot move through a solid object over waist high or another figure (unless they let you). You can climb over or up an object but this is at half speed. Swimming and Stealthy movement is also at half speed.

2. Use Magic

A Shugenja can cast one spell from his Spellbook in a turn. Spells can be cast repeatedly. Casting a spell requires a successful Knowledge Skill check. To cast a spell on an enemy you must be able to see him.

A Ninja, Monk or Samurai can cast one spell from his limited repertoire as above for a Shugenja. These appear as supernatural abilities not spells.

A Monk can use Holy Light or Healing once in a turn, but not both.

3. Bloody Combat

Heroes & monsters can attack once each in a turn. Except Samurais with Double Trouble.

You can only engage another figure in close combat in a square next to your own (including diagonally).

You can shoot at any figure that is in line of sight & range, even if they are fighting.

The Heroes always attack first.

The attacker makes a Fighting or Shooting skill check minus their opponent's DEX.

If there is more than one attacker attacking a single opponent in close combat each one gets +1 to their Training Level. A Ninja gets +2 because they are opportunists.

The difference between what the attacker needs & what he scores is the damage.

If his weapon is a Katana, Two-handed Sword, Crossbow or a Hunting Spear he gets +1 to damage.

Armour stops the first few points of damage. Light Armour stops one point, Medium two, Heavy three and a shield one extra point on top of armour.

If his armour doesn't stop all the damage the defender must make a Toughness skill roll.

He must roll less than his Toughness minus the remaining damage, or he becomes Wounded.

A Wounded figure has all his skills reduced by 3 points (including Toughness).

If wounded a second time he is knocked out.

A KO'd figure can be easily killed or captured.

4. Use other Skills

Anything not listed above can now be done.
